DEATH OF JOSEPH RAPP.

JAN. 18 — 1900

Joseph Rapp died at the home of his brother in this city, to where he had been moved from his home near James a week before his death, as the result of brain fever, followed by an attack of typhoid after an illness of about three weeks. Deceased was thirty-six years of age and an old resident of this county, coming here from Wisconcin in an early day. In 1886 he married a daughter of John McKiver whom he leaves in comfortable circumstanses being insured for $2.000 in the Modern Woodman lodge. The funeral occurred from the Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon and the remains were laid to rest in Union cemetry. Rev. J. Scott Butt was the officiating clergyman. Special services were conducted by the Modern Woodman lodge who escorted the remains to the cemetery.
